CORPORAL IN CO. M

WRITES FROM FRONT

Corporal John McDrummond, a corporal in Co. M, 125 Infantry, has written a letter to his parents. In his letter Corporal McDrummond tells of his being wounded twice while engaged in battle. His letter follows:

Sept. 9, 1918.—Dear Folks: Still the world goes around and most everyone here is gay. I suppose I may as well tell you how we are getting on out here some other way. I was wounded the last time we were at the front; shot through the upper left arm, but no damage done as it went in and out without hitting the bone. It has been here nine days and will heal here soon; as you will know, it is nothing but a good chance to rest. Well, I am lucky. I only need to go by the way of one and let the million go by as I know there must have been that many more by the sound. It was a warren few minutes, but the Germans ran before we got our share of them. We are just on the edge of a real town. I am going to town this afternoon. With thirty cents for two of us, we take it from here and go to have some fine walking around. There is a fellow from my outfit with me and so far we have been able to stay together and I hope our good luck will last, as it is time to travel with one you know.

"Don't you worry about me, as by the time you are reading this, I will be miles away from here, and when I get home will show you the spot on my arm. Love to all."

"CORP. JOHN McDRUMMOND."

SLIGHT DECREASE IN TOTAL ATTENDANCE OF LOCAL PUBLIC SCHOOLS

TOTAL ENROLLMENTS IN JANESVILLE'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS SHOW SMALL DECREASE OVER LAST YEAR.

GIVE SCHOOL CENSUS

School Census of 1918 Contains Names of 3,423 Persons Between Ages of Four and Twenty

Figures now available at the office of the Superintendent of Schools, show a slight decrease in the attendance of the local public school from the previous years. In five of the graded public schools a very small attendance over 1917 is noted, while in the remaining four graded schools and the Industrial school, the attendance has materially decreased. In the high school the total enrollment figures up to 423, compared to 532 last year. The slump of 49 may be attributed to the war, as a number of high school pupils have left school to engage in work, or in a few cases left to enter the service of the government.

The total number of enrollments in the graded schools numbers 1,759 compared to 1,697 last year. This is a slight gain of 42. On the other hand, adding the small total of the high school to this, makes the result up to 2,222 for 1918 and 2,229 in 1917. The school census of June, 1918, contained 3,423 names. This total may cause some confusion, as the school attendance records only 2,222. This decrease is attributed to the fact that the census includes the parochial school of the city, and all persons between the ages of four and twenty. A child is not obliged to enter school until he has reached the age of seven and is not obliged to continue after he has reached seventeen. This would show that a number who were recorded in the school census have either not yet entered school or have left to enter some occupation. These reasons, coupled with others such as, leaving the city, leaving the school, and leaving the school, account for the large difference between the school census and the school attendance. A complete report of the attendance from 1915 up to the present year follows:

School	1915	1916	1917	1918
Jefferson	384	382	409	378
Garfield	117	128	756	144
Lincoln	186	132	59	32

ARTILLERY BRIGADE IS SAFE OVER SEAS

From the card received by Mrs. Neal Dopp, announcing the arrival safe overseas of her husband, comes the assurance that the Artillery Brigade, which was part of the 66th division and marched through Janesville on route for Sparta last May, has landed somewhere and is ready for service. Mr. Dopp was member of Battery E of the 338 heavy artillery which is commanded by Major Dwight Brewer, a former resident of Pt. Atkinson and for several years connected with the Gazette in the editorial and business offices. The brigade spent the summer at Camp Robinson, Sparta, and since they have departed the reservation has been closed for the winter and except for caretakers is deserted.

VICTOR HEMMING LEAVES FOR CAMP

JANESVILLE MARINE TELLS OF TRAINING

Cecil Cripps, Eighteen Year Old Marine, in a Letter to His Mother Describes Training Station.

Private Cecil Cripps, Co. C, U. S. Marines, has written a very interesting letter to his mother from Quantico, Va., where he is stationed. In his letter Cecil Cripps explains the training of the Marines.

CECIL CRIPPS.

Private Cripps is eighteen years of age and enlisted in the Marine corps last July. His letter follows:

Quantico, Va., Sept. 15, 1918.—Dear Mother: Well, I have got a few minutes to myself and will drop you a few lines. I am going to tell you something about the place automatic rifle detachment.

"These rifles are on the same principal as a machine gun, only that they weigh about 18 pounds. They can be carried easily and can fire 300 shots a minute. We practice shooting at night. They have a field of dummy Germans and we sneak upon them; they shoot up rockets from behind the line, then we hoot them down. Well, up here there is a little town. It reminds me of Camp Douglas. We can get a dish of ice cream and a change of something to eat here. Last Sunday we had chicken, watermelon and ice cream and cake. Jam is a common food for us down here. I am getting sick of it."

"We were three days on the trip up from Paris Island. We had sleepers on the train. They sure treat the Marines better than any other branch of the service. Did not get a chance to see Lyle yet. If I do not get a furlough and get the money I am going to Washington Sunday. We are only thirty miles from there."

"Well, I will have to close for this time. With love to all."

ORFORDVILLE PRISONERS BROUGHT TO JANESVILLE

Officer Jones and City Marshal Osgard of Orfordville, brought three prisoners to the county jail, last evening, after having kept them until this morning, when they were taken to Orfordville to answer charges of drunkenness and disorderly.

The three brought here by the officers were Ernest Vaughn, Andrew Layton and A. E. Ames. The men were arrested in Orfordville, yesterday, after they had caused a good deal of disturbance. They were taken to the village on the ten-thirty train this morning.

HUGH McINTOSH GETS FIVE MONTHS IN JAIL

Hugh McIntosh who entered a plea of guilty on Monday in the municipal court to the charge of stealing two rings from the Planters Hotel was this morning sentenced to serve five months in the county jail.

McIntosh told Judge Maxfield that he came to this country from Scotland a year ago and has been living in Rockford for the past several months. Both of the rings stolen were recovered by Chief of Police Peter D. Cham-

DRUNKEN MAN GIVES SEPTEMBER MORN JIG

John Schumacker Arrested Last Evening After Causing Great Excitement by His Wild Actions.

John Schumacker entertained several Third Ward residents last evening when he attempted before a September Morn dance. A call was sent to the police station that a man was running around in the vicinity of Bluff and Court street in the nude.

Desk Sergeant William Gower and Patrolman J. Shewcock hurried to the scene but were unable to locate the dancer. They continued their search and came upon the man a block away. Evidently the cold breeze did not suit his fancy as he was fully robed when taken into custody.

He was taken before Judge Maxfield this morning on a charge of drunkenness and was fined fifteen dollars and costs or twenty days.

Joe Mills was arrested yesterday afternoon in an intoxicated condition. When searched at the station it was found that Mills was carrying a small twenty-two calibre revolver. The gun was one of the smallest types made. He appeared before Judge Maxfield this morning and was assessed fifteen dollars and costs or twenty days.

H. Tritten paid a fine of ten dollars and costs this morning when he entered a plea of guilty to the charge of drunkenness.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—"At least 70 per cent of the beef to be gathered west of the Missouri River this season already has been marketed," said D. B. Zimmerman. "High prices and lack of feed started the run early and thirty days hence the effect of this will be in evidence."

"The drop in light stuff is not detected now, but will probably develop low spot for the season. Montana is closely gathered and there are fewer cattle in Kansas pastures than most people in the trade suspect."

"Advancing cost of feed may send a lot of light stuff to market during November, but there will be little beef."

Western Cattle Look Up.

Cattle trade was strong to 25c higher, western cattle looking 50 @ 75c higher than the low spot late last week.

Young hogs have not had sufficient new corn to put them in condition to make grade percentages, but will show improvement in this respect. The drop in light stuff is due partly to cessation of fresh meat demand, which has been the life of the trade for weeks past.

A heavy October and November run of light hogs is probable. Missouri and Kansas are throwing them into the St. Louis and Kansas City markets; Indiana is sending hogs to Chicago and Ohio is keeping Buffalo and Pittsburgh well supplied.

Retail Meat Unwarmed.

Increase in the restaurant, hotel and retail cost of beef at this juncture is unwarranted. A few choice cattle are selling at the high point of the year, but on the rank and file of beef cattle prices are $1 @ 2c lower than a month ago. Hogs have declined $1 @ 1.25 per cwt and sheep and lambs anywhere from $1.50 to $2 per cwt.

A run of 15,000 cattle was half weaned, of which Montana furnished the bulk.

Butcher stuff of all kinds, including canners sold 25 @ 50c higher than last week.

Quotations:

Choice to prime steers . . . 13.75 @ 19.00

Good to choice steers . . . 15.50 @ 18.75

Hog Run Breaks Prices.

A run of 23,000 hogs broke prices 25c after the opening. The heavy top was made at $9.95, but $19.65 took choice light stuff late in the session.

Quotations:

Good to choice mediums . . . 19.65 @ 19.95

Choice to heavy . . . 19.45 @ 19.95

Good to choice heavy . . . 19.25 @ 19.65

Good heavy packing . . . 18.25 @ 18.50

Common heavy packing . . . 18.00 @ 18.25

A run of 35,000 sheep carried a heavy feeder end. Fat stuff acted somewhat better, but it was a mean trade in feeders and all the native lambs available, a decent class of natives selling at $14.50, although $15 was quotable.

Quotations:

Good to choice lambs . . . 16.00 @ 17.00

Fair to good lambs . . . 14.50 @ 16.00

Common to fair lambs . . . 10.00 @ 14.50

PROFESSIONAL MEN TURN SHIP BUILDERS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Oct. 2.—Records of the United States Shipping Board show that, through the education and training section and the industrial relations group, the emergency fleet corporation has taken 10,000 absolutely green men and made them competent shipbuilders.

Many never before saw a ship. Included among them are clergymen, physicians, lawyers, college professors, high school and grammar school teachers, traveling salesmen, clerks, street car conductors, real estate agents, contractors, bank clerks, and insurance agents. Out of such material as this, the yard instructors are finding mechanical ability which is being utilized to build in record time a gigantic merchant marine.

The emergency fleet corporation has established twenty-one training centers in the various shipyards and at these courses in building ships are given applicants, a majority of whom become competent workmen in a surprisingly short space of time. One of the largest of these training centers is at Hog Island, near Philadelphia. At present about 2,200 green men from all sections of the United States are striving to acquire the fundamentals of a specialized trade in shipbuilding. The trades taken up at the schools include riveting, chipping and caulking, drilling, reaming, ship carpentering, erecting and the preliminaries of shipfitting and pipefitting. It depends entirely on the individual intelligence and application of the student how long it takes him to pick up the trade he has selected. Usually it requires from two to four weeks for a student to prepare himself, although some grasp the fundamentals in a much quicker time. After serving an apprenticeship of ten days to two weeks in the training school, the student is turned over to the production foreman and put to work on the ways in the shipyard. During the period of training the student earns from 60 to 85 cents per hour. When they go into the shipyard for actual productive work the amount they earn depends on their individual ability.

A Soldier's Letter

A descriptive letter of Paris from an Evansville boy.

France, Sept. 6, 1918.
Dear folks at home: I have had a mighty fine time since I last wrote you. I will relate chronologically. I arrived in Paris last Sunday night. Two of us tried to put up at the Y. M. C. A. but it was impossible, as all rooms were full. We found another hotel where we got a pleasant room and bath with lots of big mirrors. In fact as a dollar and a quarter apiece.

Monday morning I started sight-seeing. I saw too much to describe well, but I have sent you some post cards which I hope reach you. They will supplement my meager description. The church of St. Madeleine is the most beautiful, inside of any church I have ever in. I thought it more beautiful than Notre Dame. Notre Dame, however, is more grand and impressive. Fortunately I happened into St. Madeleine when they were holding service. The music was beautiful. I can't describe the church, but it had, inside, marble pillars, supporting cornices, paintings along the side and front, white marble angels on the altar, a tall, dark, carved wooden pulpit, which is the place a large number of the people were guillotined in the revolution. Also walked through the Tuilleries gardens, but they were not particularly attractive. In the afternoon went on a "Y" tour down to Notre Dame. The front view is wonderful as the post cards show. Inside it is 110 feet deep to the choir and very narrow for its height. High columns border the sides of the room as you see it. Of course there is considerable room outside the columns. I walked along the sides there and to be two or three stories of boxes, like theatre boxes. I don't know what they are for, if for an audience, or of staid class. After there must have been a hundred and fifty feet of room and back here were carved groups representing instances in the life of Christ. I think probably Notre Dame was the most interesting building I saw in Paris.

We also visited that church of St. Germain, where the shell killed seven people and wounded a lot more. It had torn a big hole in the roof. In this church was the original painting of the Virgin from the "cease". We have the print in that book at home. Also saw the Palace of Justice where Dreyfus was tried. The ceiling of the hall is the most gorgeous I have ever seen—very deeply engraved frieze work with a painting and all gold plated or gilded. Cost about a million and a half francs. And took about a year to make. Went then to see the Ferris wheel and the tower and the big gun recently captured by the British.

That night we went to the Folies Bergere—vaudeville. Parts of it were beautiful. One act was the most daring I have ever seen, almost rough in parts. The girl that pulled the rough part afterwards gave a monologue purporting to be cheering soldiers as they passed by on the street below, and she would throw them something. It wasn't overdone, and was really so good. Retiring to the wine room and girls who had come there for that purpose practiced their wiles on innocent youth such as myself. A rather interesting dance which I resisted, and the enemy withdrew, defeated.

The next morning I went back to see the Triumphal Arch. It is the way of Augustus church. In the afternoon I went on another "Y" trip down to Versailles, where the palace of Louis XIV. is located. This is a beautiful place. Such beautiful living rooms. One long room has murals all around it descriptive of French glories in war. The murals are of the period of the twenty-eight years of his interference. At times Louis XIV. had five or six thousand men and horses working on it. The murals are artificial, but look very natural. A case in it has been built up with a marble group inside and an artificial lake in front. It is beautiful.

That night I went to the opera and saw the "Tales of Hoffman". The orchestra was mighty good, and there were also some good singers—a very good soprano.

The next morning I took the train for Lyons. It was a wonderful trip. Paris has many beautiful sights—statues in profusion, but many covered with sand bags. Of course the most valuable paintings are also removed from the city.

Well, I arrived at the station to which I was ordered and was assigned to the 8th Aero Squadron. I was taken over to it the next morning. They are also assigned to this squadron. We are now at the front. I expect to get some flying around first, and so it may be some time before I get to camp. It is a beautiful location on a hillside with trees about it and looking across beautiful country. Conditions are very good and we also get some service. I am also assigned to this squadron. I have been issued a flying equipment—one fur-lined electric heated Teddy bear, a light weight leather wool-soled flying helmet, a pair of sheep-pelt overalls to put on over my shoes, steel helmet, gas mask, plane and ammunition. So you see I am pretty well fixed. There are five of my old bunch in this squadron and we are all well pleased with our outlook.

I am well, as usual, and I surely hope this finds you feeling as well as I do. With love, PAUL.
2nd Lieut. 8th Aero Squadron.

DARIEN

Darien, Sept. 30.—Miss Inez Arnold spent the week end at the home of H. M. McCarthy.

Mrs. Elton Brown and daughters Leone and Inez are on the sick list. Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Wilkins spent Sunday at the home of their son Bert J. Wilkins.

Willard Brown of Kansas City visited relatives here today. Mr. and Mrs. John Hanson moved today from the Rodman house on W. Belmont street to the Williams house on East Belmont street.

Mrs. J. E. Hoyer very pleasantly entertained the members of the T. T. T. club at her home Thursday evening.

Miss Nettie May Hoyer went to Janesville today where she will attend the Janesville Business college. Miss Marian Wilkins spent the week end at the home of Jerome Flynn, near Delavan.

The Delavan high school came to Darien Friday afternoon on their annual hike. Main street was a scene of much confusion and hilarity, while the freshmen class were being initiated. Odd looking figures paraded the streets and the air for a time was filled with dust covered boots and shoes.

Mrs. Leo Seaver of Delavan spent Saturday with Mrs. Fannie Liddle.

Professor and Mrs. F. O. Bartlett and daughter Marjorie of Clinton were callers. Leonard Wheeler is on the sick list.

SHARON

Sharon, Oct. 1.—Rufus Wilkins returned home Monday from a visit with his son Will and family at La Crosse and his daughter Ethel at Oconomowoc.

Elmer Dunham, who works at Janesville, is home suffering with the grippe.

Miss Helen Burton, who is a nurse at Mercy hospital at Janesville, spent Tuesday at her home in town.

Mrs. Bernice Shager of Rockford, was called her Monday by the death of her father-in-law, E. P. Shager.

Miss Gladys Wilkins, who attends Whitewater Normal, came home Tuesday on account of illness.

Mrs. Wm. Kinney, Mrs. S. M. Vanden and Miss Edith Smith went to Milwaukee Tuesday to attend Grand Chapter of the O. E. S.

Ed. Lilley, W. C. Kinson and Martin Kelhofer were among those from here who attended a meeting in Madison Tuesday.

The funeral services of Dr. Stevens, who died at his home in Iron Mountain, Mich., will be held in Sharon Wednesday and of the services.

Much regret was expressed by the people of Sharon, when it became known that Dr. H. T. Haverstock had decided to accept a fine position in a hospital at Lincoln, Nebraska, and will leave for that place in the latter part of the month.

An inquest over the death of E. P. Shager was held in the village hall Monday afternoon and Dr. J. F. M. Ing was called as juror. F. M. Ing, Chas. Finn, Chas. Morris, Fred Wolcott, Chas. Knitlans and Will Carney. The following verdict was given: E. P. Shager came to his death at 2:30 p. m. on Sunday, Sept. 28, while engaged in the business of driving a truck, by being struck by a south bound train, commonly called the milk train, which was running through the village at an excessive rate of speed.

We therefore condemn the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad Company for this act.

S. A. T. C. OPENS AT MILTON COLLEGE

Milton, Oct. 1.—The official opening of the S. A. T. C. at Milton college took place at eleven o'clock. The village band marched while playing to the upper campus. About a dozen veterans of the Grand Army stood near the band. Then came the school children, the members of the high school, the college faculty, and several hundred citizens.

The Milton college unit of the S. A. T. C. under the command of Lieut. Daves, assisted by Lieut. Gray, marched from the gymnasium to a point on the campus east of the flag pole, to the music of the national anthem, when the flag was raised and floated proudly above the encircling crowd on the campus slopes. Lieut. Daves read in clear tones the orders of the day, General Order No. 73.

From the war department, likewise the message of President Wilson to the men of the Students' Army Training Corps, also a statement from the assistant secretary of war, closing with the message of General March, chief of staff, U. S. army. President Daland spoke of the patriotic service of Milton college to the nation in the days of '01, when Company K enlisted on her campus and marched away to serve the cause of the union. Now again, as in those days," said President Daland, "the college seeks to serve the country. We now dedicate this campus as a drill ground, and that gymnasium as a drill room, and that hall yonder as a barracks for the student soldiers of this training corps."

Dr. L. C. Randolph, on behalf of the college trustees and the people of Milton greeted the officers and men of this Milton detachment of the S. A. T. C.

President Yoder of the Whitewater normal school delivered a well-chosen address, a short address upon the fraternal connection of Milton college and his own institution in the joint task of supplying the needed educational basis for the further studies of our young student soldiers.

Lieut. Daves read the oath to the flag, the men of the detachment and the public repeating it after him. The exercises were concluded by the playing of America.

These and similar exercises throughout the land mark officially and publicly the American colleges and universities to the highest educational ideals of our country.

Liberty Loan.

It is desired to correct the impression which seems to have been in the minds of some as to the payment and subscriptions for Liberty bonds. It is thought by some that the payment of Liberty bonds at the Bank of Milton is restricted to residents of the village of Milton. This is not true. It is announced that proper credit for subscriptions of residents of the towns of Harmony, Johnston, Lima and Milton will be given to the townships in which the subscribers reside.

SILAGE

Silage as a feed for dairy cows properly prepared cannot be too highly praised.

It utilizes all the crop and the entire plant is used by the cow, or returned to the field as manure. It furnishes nutrients cheaper than can be secured in any other way. It furnishes a good, palatable, appetizing, succulent ration for the winter, which compares very favorably with summer pasture. It keeps the cow's digestive tract in good condition and sharpens her appetite. The result is that she will consume a larger ration than if her ration is composed of dry feed.

LIBERTY LOAN COMMITTEE HAS FORMULATED PLANS FOR INTENSIVE DRIVE.

$1,100,000 LOCAL QUOTA

Janesville People on Edge and Workers
Chin That City Will Go Over the Top in Two Days.

Janesville is going over the top in the fourth Liberty loan in even better style than they did in the third loan. The quota set for the city is $1,100,000 and it is expected that the sum will be subscribed by next Wednesday evening or two days after the intensive campaign opens.

Charles Mudgett and R. E. Wisner, members of the executive board, have completed all plans for the intensive campaign which opens on Tuesday morning and both the men stated this morning that without a doubt Janesville would be well over the required mark by Wednesday evening.

A large barometer will be erected at the corner of Milwaukee and Main streets and the whistles throughout the city will blow each time one hundred thousand dollars has been added, starting Tuesday morning.

It is the opinion of all workers connected with the loan campaign that Janesville will make an even better showing this time than they did during the third loan.

The showing made by this city during the third Liberty loan was splendid and demonstrated beyond a doubt that the people of Janesville are willing and anxious to do all they possibly can to support the government and stand back of the boys in the trenches.

Many people are going to the loan headquarters at 5 North Main street and purchasing their bonds. This work has been advocated by all the local leaders and the campaign is less arduous. Each person that comes to the headquarters and buys a bond is given a Liberty loan button signifying that the wearer is a volunteer in the campaign.

A card party will be held at St. Mary's hall Friday evening, October 4. Refreshments served and dancing afterwards. Admission, 5c.

MORRIS MILLER

Everything that the government makes in handling the wartime athletic problems, as well as every other national question—especially more and more the fact that the men handling our affairs in this critical period are giving every minute detail their careful consideration.

Not a story is taken which has not been meditated upon and studied from all angles.

The reason of this little statement is the reason word from Washington that colleges will be asked to drop the freshman rule in athletics during the war.

When the government decided to close the big league baseball season early and put the players in some useful occupation the baseball powers hollered "inference." They pointed out that the nation would suffer.

The way the world series passed into history without causing even a ripple of enthusiasm and the way the soldiers in the camps are increasing the number of teams and games played daily indicates that the government had seen the situation correctly, apparently in the face of general opinion.

Then a few days ago the men in charge of the student training corps to be established in practically all of the colleges, announced that football would not be allowed to interfere with the routine of military training. This meant, of course, that the big intercollegiate games, calling for weeks of training, would be impossible.

The cavalry howlers worked overtime.

But the men handling the situation are working it out practically and without any furore.

Their latest step is to urge colleges to drop the rule most of them now observe, which bars freshmen from intercollegiate athletics. The athletic officials are asked to agree to abolish it.

Washington points out that the reason for this request is the fact that many of the men who enter the student training corps will attend college only a short time. The freshman rule would keep many of them out of athletics.

The abolishment of that rule would encourage all first year men to enter athletics in a whole-hearted way. It would produce better teams.

The men in charge of the student training courses have requested that the institutions engage in intramural games and arrange schedules with nearby colleges where the trips will not interfere with the military course.

The wiping out of the freshman rule will enable the small colleges to produce much stronger teams. This will encourage them to book games with the larger colleges in their territories and ought to produce better football—sport that will hold the interest of the student bodies and the outside fans.

To prove to the army and navy recruiting officers that a man at sixty-five still carries a punch, William J. Duffy, a deputy internal revenue collector, swam from Brooklyn Bridge to Coney Island recently in three hours and thirty-two minutes. His long swim ended about half a mile beyond the Coney Island point. This is the first time that Duffy has performed this feat.

Duffy dived from a tug at Brooklyn Bridge at 11:40 a. m. The water was quite choppy, though both wind and tide were favorable.

A number of friends accompanied the aged swimmer to the tug for most of the way. At Fort Hamilton, however, the tug had to leave him to go through the war gate near Staten Island. It picked him up again three-quarters of an hour later.

Ten years ago Duffy made two attempts to swim from Brooklyn Bridge to Sandy Hook, but was unsuccessful. His cross-country runner, some time when younger, and held the mile record of the New York Athletic club for some time.

The smaller colleges throughout the country may reap a tremendous benefit from football this coming season.

The war department ruling placing intercollegiate football subordinate to military training will aid the little fellows. The department has announced that football must not interfere with the routine of military training at the colleges where student training schools are conducted. This means that the long trips of the colleges must be cancelled. The only games that can be arranged are those between institutions so near together that the longer can make the trip after sessions Saturday.

Most of the colleges plan to continue football despite this ruling, believing that it will help keep up the interest in sport—desired by the government.

In past years the stronger colleges in the east and in the west have scheduled their games with other big colleges of their class. The only games that little schools got were the bigger institutions were mere practice sessions. The Big Six, in the east, and the Big Nine in the west, received most of the publicity.

Now the big colleges, to arrange enough games to warrant having teams, will have to schedule the little fellows nearby for some of the games. A victory or even credible showing by a team from the smaller school would draw considerable attention to the smaller institution.

Brown university, for instance, is building up a team. It will be impossible to book games with Yale, Princeton, Cornell and Syracuse this year. So the "smaller" colleges will be given a chance to tackle the Brown eleven.

It's within the range of possibilities, too, that some of the smaller institutions—from an athletic point of view—may produce formidable teams. Incidentally most of the big stars of most of last year's grid teams have gone to war. There will be a new crop this year. From this new crop may spring new stars who will draw attention to their schools.

William Holmes is going overseas. Know William?

Well, maybe you'd better call him "Ducky."

Baseball fans know him only as "Ducky."

He is now a member of the Y. M. C. A. corps of athletic instructors and leaves for France in the near future. Ducky gained baseball fame in many ways.

He was a star years ago when Andy Freedman owned the Giants. He was also a member of the famous Baltimore Orioles. He broke into the limelight at one time by locking out of the Polo grounds by order of Andy, on a charge of insulting the Giant owner.

After Ducky served his time in the big show he dropped to the minors. He played and managed clubs. Last year he bossed the Sioux City club of the Western League.

San Francisco, which has turned out a number of gold fighters in the past, may turn out a great many more in the future, for George E. Gallagher, president of the board of education in that city, has drawn up a resolution providing for the introduction of boxing in the high schools. The pupils, of course, favor the idea, and as it does not lack for support in official circles, it is likely that the sport will be placed on level with baseball, football and other sports in the curriculum.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Margaret Marsh, the pretty sister of Mae Marsh, has a new job on her hands. She is busy with the Houdini serial and, in addition to her other work she has to make up Houdini every time he faces the camera in the life serial in which he is perpetuating his famous tricks.

Said Marguerite the other evening: "No days off in sight for me. I didn't work yesterday, but I had to go out to the studio and make up Houdini. His wife made him up for his stage appearances for many years. But to make him up for the screen would mean leaving New York about 7 a. m. in the morning and so she is giving me her life-long job. If I didn't like them both so well I might object to getting up in time to say good-by to the moon—but it is, I like my work so much I am glad to do this bit of a favor for them."

"In fact," she explained, "I am so happy in my work that I even forget that I have to live in a horrid hotel."

And that is saying quite a bit, because the Marsh family is separated for the first time and Marguerite must live in a hotel instead of in the pretty home on Riverside drive.

Mae Marsh is living in an apartment hotel, Mildred and Frances Marsh live in school in Virginia and Mrs. Marsh is getting ready to go to the coast.

When the coal situation looked so serious and it seemed as if Mac might have to go with God, he decided it would be folly to lease an apartment for any length of time, so the Marsh home was broken up. Marguerite, busy with the Houdini serial, did not care to take the responsibility of signing a lease and since Mrs. Marsh had to go to California, well, to separate was the only thing for them to do.

"Hidden Film" Mac's next Goldwyn release, is said to give her the sort of role in which she is best fitted to shine. She plays a dual character in her new film, Olive Marsh, who did the camera work, is said to have gotten some beautiful effects.

Some family, this Marsh family. Two stars, a cameraman, an artist and a musician, the boys of the family. Quite complete, one would say, in itself.

MISS KEARNEY AT THE APOLLO THEATRE

An eloquent address was given to a capacity audience last evening at the Apollo theatre by Miss Belle Kearney of Mississippi. Her talk was along the line of the beginnings of the war, women's place in it and some suggestions as to how the boys could be helped. She was very eloquent and her subjects were well received.

She has been abroad many times, has toured through Germany, met Von Buelow at social functions, was acquainted with many of the boys of the war, and officials of France, and so was enabled to make many interesting observations at first hand among the peoples in the war.

She gave a description of the Crown Prince of Germany as she had seen him and mentioned the board of his father, as early as the year of 1909 that he was the virtual ruler of America, as he could sway the elections in this country by means of his millions of German Americans over here.

She spoke particularly of the influence of the socialists in Germany, which was very strong, and which might have a powerful effect in ending the war. The women of the streets like sheep, she said when asking for bread and German women were being worked in the mines, and in doing menial work behind the lines, as well as being chained to the machine guns to defend the trenches.

She gave a vivid word picture of Belgium which like a mighty dyke kept back the German hordes, and preferred death and annihilation rather than loss of honor.

She gave brief descriptions of some of the atrocities committed against women and children by the German soldiery, and mentioned the fact that it was them who first used the horrible liquid fire, and deadly gases in warfare. She also described a Zeppelin raid in London as she had witnessed it.

She closed with a statement that America was the shining hope of the world, in this great crisis of history, and a plea that it should keep faithful to her trust.

She was introduced to the audience by Mr. Phelps, the new physical director at the Y. M. C. A. building.

A very fine series of films on the Battle Line of Italy was given previous to the lecture. It included pictures of air plane battles, of manœuvres of the fleet, and of war in the trenches among the mountains.

is soon to be released by William Fox. The first appearance of this moving picture play was given on Thursday when several million men registered in the selective draft. The production was directed by R. A. Walsh, who staged "The Prussian Cur" and "The Honor System."

To Play Martyred Nurse. The life of Edith Cavell, the Red Cross nurse whom the Germans shot in the early stages of the war, will be shown in pictures soon. Julia Arthur, the famous actress, will play the role of Miss Cavell. The story was written by Anthony P. Kelly, who has produced some of the best known patriotic film stories, and is to be called "The Woman the Germans Shot."

WANTED TO JOIN ARMY AFTER HE STRUCK WIFE; JUDGE FINES HIM $200

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS] Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 2.—W. H. Heather beat his wife, choked her and threw a lighted stove at her. Still she did not object to the treatment until he said: "I hear you've been joy riding in the city ambulance with a certain doctor." Then Mrs. Ann Heather, a city nurse, had him arrested. "I'll fine you $200," said the court. "But, your honor, I want to go to the army and—" said Heather. "All right, Heather," replied the judge. "You can go to the city farm. Salute your superior officer. Pelier Lieutenant Leroy Casey, and go with him."

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MR. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a bachelor, 35. For years I have considered myself a woman hater, but recently I have been having a change of heart. I met this summer and wanted to ask a girl twice, but this time I did and the second time she asked me to go for a walk on Sunday afternoon.

We took a great walk and became very good friends. I found her a very nice girl and almost "her" enough to ask her to be my wife. Several times when she let me.

The last time we were together she seemed the same little friend in every way except that she wanted to kiss me. I asked her why and she answered me in a strange way. She said she liked to be kissed and she would not mind my kissing her, but she believed kisses too sacred to make commonplaces.

Don't you think she made that excuse because she no longer cares for me? I should like to ask her to marry me, but I don't want to be turned down.

The girl's answer would indicate, I should say, that she has fallen in love and she no longer wants to kiss a man unless he is the one man. The old saying holds true in your case, "Faint heart never won fair lady." Ask her to marry you and she will tell you where you really stand in her affections.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My father is dead and my mother and grandmother and I live together. My grandmother is an invalid and so mother is kept home with her except when I stay and take her place.

For several months I have been going with a man who wants to marry me now. I love him with all my heart, and would do so in a minute except that I do not feel I can leave mother and grandmother. I have asked him and he does not believe that I should start their life together in a home with some one else.

I want to marry him, but know I can not be happy if I do. I am afraid about it and do the wrong thing. What do you think is my duty?

I believe you should marry. Even if you do not live in the same house with your mother you can relieve her at times and can see her often. A girl owes something to herself, and I do marry. I think it is selfishness for her to marry. The man is right—when it is all possible a young couple should start their lives alone.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I was keeping company with a young man four months and then he was called to war. We corresponded regularly after he went to camp and he seemed to care a lot for me. I got a card telling me of his safe arrival and then I got one later, but I have not heard from him for several weeks.

Do you think it is possible that he has fallen in love with some other girl and that he no longer cares for me? I am afraid he has. I am afraid he has. I am afraid he has.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Are tricorn hats large or small? MISS VOGUE.

Some tricorn hats are large and some are small. There are many styles of hats. Some hats have corners darting off in irregular lengths and others are symmetrically shaped.

trouble between Blake and his wife, then you complain about things here. Lillian Blake's been a pretty good friend to us, Edie. I think you ought to be a little grateful to her.

Edith Perot was a good woman, but not without spirit. It hurt her deeply that her husband should blame her and take sides with Lillian. Lillian who had urged her to get John into debt so that she might make just such a showing as Lillian herself was making tonight.

Edith was exasperated. "Grateful to her for suggesting that I buy my frocks as she does hers—by heaping up bills that we can never pay! Grateful to her when she calls me a fool for trying to earn my extra clothes by cooking? Grateful to her for scolding me for my plans and setting you against them? Grateful to her for making me feel that I am a failure and a disgrace?"

"Why didn't you tell me you and Lillian had fallen out?" he said. "It was hardly a falling out. Just a difference of opinion. I'm not with you. What do you matter?"

"It matters when you start a quarrel between a husband and wife, and that's what you did!"

Edith's face turned crimson. "Why, John, how can you talk to me like that? I never in my life willingly started a disagreement."

"Well, look at their faces and judge for yourself!"

She shot a frightened glance at the Blakes. It needed no second look to tell her Lillian's smile was not for her partner. That Al Blake was not feeling in the least disposed to let Edith turn back to her husband.

John, I told Al Blake nothing of my own accord. He simply guessed that I had looked up to him. I am not ashamed of it. I am not ashamed of it. I am not ashamed of it.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

Young ladies should remember, that when they reach a place where articles of their gentlemen callers, they are called upon to conduct themselves accordingly and should leave off school girls' ways and mannerisms.

MISS D. If your friends ask you to join them for an ice cream treat, it is courteous to accept and stay with them for a while, then offer to leave unless they urge you to stay longer, thank them and leave. It is not usual to shake hands with the person one is introduced to, except in the case of a woman and a man.

Boasting of Being Able to Get White Flour. Does it seem possible that a man would go about in this day and generation, regularly, with a handkerchief in his pocket to get white flour? Does it seem conceivable that a While Babies Freeze to Death. Does it seem as if, while babies in the very city in which she lived were freezing to death, a woman could say that she thought these fuel regulations, these requests for us to wear warm clothing and keep the temperature down were all exaggerated, and that she always wore light dresses in the house because she thought they were prettier and that she intended to keep her house comfortable if her husband's influence could accomplish it and she thought it could.

Doesn't it seem as if ever a commonplace, self-centered person would be so shaken out of himself by living in such stirring times, that he would see things in their proper valuation and realize that to take advantage of special privileges in these days is a cowardly and not a boastworthy thing.

Would you think there would be a man or woman left who wouldn't instinctively feel pride in doing as much as he could, instead of as little, to help win a war in which the happiness of the world is at stake?

When summer comes again I'll sing The merry, merry bells, Of flowers bright and gay, Of we go, o'er the snow, Of babbling brooks and mossy nooks, Through the frosty dells, With a ring, a ring, a ring, And a ding, a ding, a ding.

SIDE TALKS

—BY— RUTH CAMERON

ARE YOU PROUD OF THE RIGHT THINGS?

Pride is a splendid spur toward success in both doing and being. It is a very big thing if it is—IF you are proud of the right things.

But to be proud of the wrong things is to have completely lost one's sense of direction in the ways of life.

Two spoken of various varieties of the emotion, but the one thing is certain and you've all met examples of it. There's the person who is proud of having a handwriting so illegible that it is a bone to everyone who has to depend on it for communication with him.

There's the woman who is proud of her domestic helplessness, who was not brought up to know how to make her own bed and who regards this incapacity as a distinction. (Thank goodness she is rapidly going out of style.)

But the variety of wrong pride which has particularly impressed me lately is the almost incomprehensible pride which some people still feel in being able to evade government rules and regulations in regard to the war.

Boasting of Being Able to Get White Flour. Does it seem possible that a man would go about in this day and generation, regularly, with a handkerchief in his pocket to get white flour? Does it seem conceivable that a

BEING FROM MISSOURI HE HAD TO BE SHOWN

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS] Portland, Ore., Oct. 2.—Missourians still have to be shown. Among 300 workmen from the middle west imported to labor in a local shipyard was one giant Missourian, who disported himself in a most undignified manner. He was approached by a committee of workmen in the yards and asked to subscribe to the loan.

"You can't put nothing over on me, fellows," he replied. "I'll next week, and you western slickers ain't goin' to get me to give up my money to no scheme now."

The "western slickers" then proceeded to "show" him, after which he "came through like a gentleman."

THE STRUGGLE

DOMESTIC SULTRINESS. To Edith Perot the "bridge dance" was a torture. In spite of herself she had been forced to go. In spite of herself she had betrayed her disagreement with Lil Blake to Lil's husband, and had seen him grow angry with his wife. In spite of her brave effort to earn a pretty frock she had to act as a waitress in an ancient, ornate, and somewhat shabby restaurant. She had to pretend to be a waitress, and could not feel, talking to neglected men and hard-of-hearing old ladies when she longed to escape from the restaurant, and to run home to her children, with whom an elderly lady was staying.

But the climax of her discomfort came when her husband returned after the dance with Lil Blake. His wife had lost some of its cheer as he had down by Edith's side. She felt something disagreeable was coming. All she needed to complete the picture was a spat with John.

"Why didn't you tell me you and Lillian had fallen out?" he said. "It was hardly a falling out. Just a difference of opinion. I'm not with you. What do you matter?"

"It matters when you start a quarrel between a husband and wife, and that's what you did!"

Edith's face turned crimson. "Why, John, how can you talk to me like that? I never in my life willingly started a disagreement."

"Well, look at their faces and judge for yourself!"

She shot a frightened glance at the Blakes. It needed no second look to tell her Lillian's smile was not for her partner. That Al Blake was not feeling in the least disposed to let Edith turn back to her husband.

John, I told Al Blake nothing of my own accord. He simply guessed that I had looked up to him. I am not ashamed of it. I am not ashamed of it. I am not ashamed of it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Tuberculosis Never Inherited. QUESTION.—Tuberculosis Never Inherited. ANSWER.—Tuberculosis is a hereditary disease? Will a child of "cured" parents be afflicted? I have a number of small pimples of tuberculosis on my face and chest that I have been told are caused by any bad habit, or are they caused by tuberculosis? (A. J. W.)

ANSWER.—Tuberculosis is a hereditary disease. Offspring of cured parents are more liable than any other children to have tuberculosis. The pimples are probably the usual pimples (acne pimples from blackheads) of youth, not due to tuberculosis, but related to tuberculosis. The duration of tuberculosis is for life, but the disease may be arrested when it is in the early stages of intellectual treatment. Once tuberculosis is arrested, tuberculosis, even though a perfect health is in due time regained.

BE PATIENT. Dr. Snidgen felt Ramsey Beauoup's pulse, probing busily inside his rattled sleeve.

"H'm," he said cheerfully. "Then," politely begging his pardon for prying his mouth open to look at his tongue, he said pleasantly, "Hah! after that he undid Ramsey's soiled shirt and tested his heart with a gyroscope."

"H'm," he said jovially, "you seem to be all right."

"Glad to hear it, doc," said Ramsey Beauoup with relief. "And by the way, I must excuse myself for dropping in in this rig. I'm on my way to a costume party in my machine. I'm a man worth eighty million."

FOR FISH DAY.

Baked Fish.—Stuff a good sized fish with dressing made of stale bread crumbs, salt and pepper and one-half cup melted butter. Bake in a hot oven for 20 minutes. Put some strips of salt pork or bacon in the bottom of the roaster and sprinkle salt and pepper on the fish and a little flour. Bake in hot oven, allowing 15 minutes to the pound. When done make a cream sauce and serve.

To Boil Fish.—A cod's head and shoulders, or a rock bass, a slice of butter and a dash of salt. Wash the fish, wrap them in a piece of cheese cloth and put them down into a long pan of boiling salted water. Add two tablespoons of vinegar and boil slowly ten minutes to each pound of fish. Be very careful not to over-boil, or the skin will crack. Lift the cheese cloth, drain the fish carefully and then it is ready to serve. Serve with slices of lemon and parsley. Serve cucumber salad or cucumber sandwiches and potatoes.

Baked Fish.—Wash and clean the fish, leaving on the head and tail. Put one cup of stale bread crumbs into a bowl, over two tablespoons of melted butter, add a tablespoon of chopped parsley, a tablespoon of salt and a dash of pepper. Mix and put into the fish, sew up the opening. Put the fish in a greased baking pan. Score the upper side—this is made deep gashes across the fish and fill them with this slice of salt pork. Add a cup of water to the pan and bake in a moderate oven about one hour. Boil every ten minutes. When done lift the fish carefully with a long fish slice and put it on a heated platter. Garnish with parsley and thin slices of lemon. Serve with either brown sauce in the pan, or with plain tomato sauce.

Fish Pudding.—Flake one pound of cold boiled fish, or you may use a can of salmon, from the skin and bones. Put a cup of stale bread crumbs and a cup of milk over the fire, stir until well blended, take from the fire, add two eggs well beaten, a teaspoon of salt, a tablespoon of chopped parsley and a saltspoon of pepper. Add the fish, turn this into a greased fish mold, stand it in a pan of water and bake in a moderate oven about one hour. When done turn it carefully onto a platter, garnish with either cream sauce or plain sauce Hollandaise.

Any left over cold boiled or baked fish may be used after this fashion.

SUGGESTIONS.
When baking ham, if syrup is substituted for brown sugar to mix with the bread crumbs and a yolk of egg with which it is covered before the final browning, a finer flavor will be obtained.

Brushing pastry lightly with syrup will give it that fine glaze considered so desirable.

A tablespoon syrup stirred into griddle cakes (not enough to sweeten) will materially lessen the process of cooking. A small proportion of cornstarch will improve their texture.

When cooking with syrup over a hot fire, to prevent from possibility of burning, drop in three or four marbles (bragates, as the boys call them). The heat will keep these constantly on the move and

BRIDE of BATTLE

A Romance of the American Army Fighting on the Battlefields of France.
By VICTOR ROUSSEAU

"I want you to think this proposition over as quickly as possible," he wrote, "not for my sake or yours, but because your duty is to take the job. With war with Germany in plain view to the horizon, there are great things doing in Washington, and I've been offered my old post at the mobilization department, which has been enlarged beyond all knowledge. Your work in the West is better known than you think, Wallace, and we want you here. Will you come, and come by the first train. This is official, so don't wait for divisional notification, which may take days."

The letter reached Mark in one of his periods of helpless despondency. Impulsively he seized it, accepting, regretted as soon as the message had been dispatched, but picked his suitcase, turned over the command to the senior lieutenant, and took the train for Washington.

As he went East the years seemed to roll from him like a dream. It was a frozen lightning in which he seemed to have been wandering; he seemed to come to himself with a consciousness of years wasted, but of years of action about.

Colonel Howard gazed curiously at him as he rose from his desk in the war office and grasped his hands.

"I should never have known you, Wallace," he said.

What he was thinking was, "Good Lord, how the years have eaten into him!"

"Don't think that your work has been unrecognized," he said, after a few minutes of desultory chatting. "It has been, and I know that recognition is coming to you in the fullest measure. You are to work under me here. It's a big scheme that we are preparing, my boy, and only Kellerman and I, and yourself, will be acquainted with all the details, outside of the departmental head. You remember Kellerman?"

Mark nodded, trying to piece together the pictures of the past.

"We're working out the mobilization plans for the first contingent, after it reaches France," Howard continued. "It's a bigger scheme than anything we knew in the past. You'll act as my subordinate and have an intimate knowledge of the details—a sort of understudy. In fact, but with a good deal of initiative as well. And if war comes, as it is sure to come, we'll be sent over on the first transport, to prepare things for the troops. Ah, Kellerman, here's Wallace, newly arrived to take over his duties."

Mark saw not the slightest change in Kellerman since the days of the Cuban war. Kellerman was just as florid as ever, just as burly, with the same rather sinister way of glancing; his black hair was unthinned and untouched with gray. He had borne the years much better than Mark.

If Kellerman reciprocated Mark's feelings, he showed no sign of it in his cynical handgrasp.

"We were glad to get you, Wallace."

Is a Merry Widow

When after my husband's death I was left alone with a young child, I was taken with typhoid fever. Since then I have suffered from stomach and liver trouble and constipation. I have doctored a great deal without benefit. Since taking May's Wonderful Remedy three months ago my bowels have moved regularly and I am feeling well again. I am now a happy widow. It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhs from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. J. P. Baker, Democrat.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to push up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles. You have a bad taste in your mouth, tongue coated, appetite poor, lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, troubled with undigested foods, you should take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief, so you can eat what you like. 4c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Resinol surely did relieve that eczema!

Pack up some Resinol Ointment in his "old kit bag." Nothing is too good for him, and he will need it "over there" where exposure, vermin, contagions, and the exigencies of a soldier's life cause all sorts of skin irritation, itching, sore feet and suffering. Resinol Ointment stops itching almost instantly. It heals little sores before they can become big ones. It cures skin comfort. For sale by all dealers.

"You'll Excuse Me For a Moment."

He said, "You'll excuse me for a moment, I'm sure."

He drew Colonel Howard aside in conversation, while Mark twirled his fingers and looked out of the window at the busy life of the capital, and tried to make himself believe that it was all true.

When Kellerman had gone the Colonel invited Mark to sit down, and launched into business.

"I must tell you that it's a pretty stiff job that we're tackling, Mark," he said. "To begin with, we're a sort of nucleus of the whole organization. We're in touch with every division. We have to have the whole thing at our fingers' ends—and it's mainly a matter of ships, animals, and transport. And to cap the climax, you can imagine what a nest of intrigue and espionage Washington has become in these days. And, as neutrals—ostensibly neutrals—we can do nothing to put an end to it."

He stretched out his finger, and pointed toward the big safe between the windows.

"Any one of some two hundred papers there," he said, "would give a valuable clue." "Every night, when work is finished, your task will be to open the safe, take out the inner case containing these documents, and those on which you have been working, including every waste sheet and every scrap of the day's blotting paper, and have the day porter convey them, under your personal supervision, to the strong room, where you and either the General, myself, or Kellerman, will place them in the safety vault. In the morning the same procedure is reversed. And that is why I insisted on our getting you, Mark. I knew you, and I don't know the hundred of other officers of impeccable character whom we could have secured. We can't run risks—we simply can't. That's why it has to be just you and Kellerman and I. We had our lesson in the old days, you know."

He frowned at the reminiscence, and then answered Mark's unspoken question with another.

"Where are you staying, Wallace?"

"Well, I want you to come and stay with us as soon as we're settled. We've rented a house in Massachusetts circle, and move in on the first of the month. Eleanor and Mrs. Howard are still in New York, but they're coming here in about ten days' time—just as soon as I can get the house ready for them. Eleanor is dying to see you, and Mrs. Howard has the pleasantest remembrance, of course. And now I'm going to take you to the Brigadier."

The short interview with the head of the department confirmed Mark's impressions as to the businesslike nature of the plans of the war office. Mark went home. He was resolved, although he had not told the Colonel, not to become his guest—at least not unless he found that he could take up his life again where he had dropped it, years before. And then—but what was the use of speculating? He went home to his hotel.

He was surprised to find how easily he seemed to fit into his environment when he donned his long-neglected evening clothes and went down to the CHAPTER V.

When at last he alighted at the door, and was shown into the reception room, he felt that he was almost trembling with eagerness.

He looked uncertainly about him, at the group of young officers, the ladies, at Mrs. Howard, and then at the stylishly dressed young woman at her side. And, forgetting his manners, he approached her in stupefaction, ignoring his hostess for the moment.

"Eleanor?"

"Uncle Mark! It's never you, Uncle Mark!" cried the girl. "Why, I should never, never have known you!"

But would he have known her, had he not looked closely into the clear eyes to discern the face of the little waif beneath the beauty of the woman? He had often and often imagined her, grown to womanhood, and dressed as she would have dressed her, but somehow she had always had the look and aspect of the child, blended with the schoolgirl. A sudden chill went through his heart at her self-mastery, the well-bred welcome that had in it little of real eagerness. And he realized that, though he had always looked on her as lost, at the bottom of his heart he must have hoped to find her again.

He stood, a gray-haired, uncomfortable, almost middle-aged man, trying to feel at home. He saw Kellerman looking at him across the room, as if there was some message in his eyes.

"I hope I haven't changed so much as all that," said Mark, trying to smile.

"No," she answered, looking at him with a searching, direct gaze. "Not really—only at first appearance. Why, Uncle Mark, your hair is turning gray. What have you been doing with yourself?"

He felt that the unconscious shaft had gone well home. He only answered vaguely. There was a little informal dancing, and, as he felt befuddled by the age, he walked a few turns with Eleanor and sat back with Mrs. Howard, surveying the gay crowd, and recalling memories—about the most disheartening thing that he could have done.

"What do you think of Eleanor?" asked Mrs. Howard. "You didn't expect to find the little schoolgirl grown up like this, did you?"

"Nor she me—like this," answered Mark humbly. But the Colonel's wife missed the allusion.

"She has been crazy to see you," Mrs. Howard continued. "She gave the Colonel no rest after he told us that he was trying to get you for the war office. I believe she had always had a sort of romantic recollection of you, and looked upon you as a sort of guardian, although, of course, it was a fortunate thing for her and us—and you, too—that Colonel Howard did not send you to the front."

He frowned at the reminiscence, and then answered Mark's unspoken question with another.

"Where are you staying, Wallace?"

"Well, I want you to come and stay with us as soon as we're settled. We've rented a house in Massachusetts circle, and move in on the first of the month. Frail, Sickly Children Improve Rapidly on Vinol

The reason we so strongly recommend Vinol for frail, sickly children is because it is a non-secret remedy which contains Beef and Cod Liver Peptones, Iron and Manganese Peptonates and Glycerophosphates—but no oil—the very elements needed to build them up. It is delicious to the taste, and children love it.

These Two Mothers Have Proved This.

Bainbridge, N.Y. "My little daughter, 18 years old, overworked and was run-down, tired all the time, nervous, had headaches, couldn't eat and had to stay out of school. Vinol has built her up. She has a good appetite, no more headaches and has returned to school again."—Mrs. Lester Andrews.

Williams, W. Va. "My little boy was weak, puny, and tired all the time, did not want to do anything. Vinol was recommended and it built up his strength and made him healthy. Now he runs and plays like other children. We certainly believe in Vinol for children."—Harley Clay.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Oct. 1878.—George B. Gleason, of Milwaukee, is in the city, the guest of Herman McKinney.

This morning, about six o'clock, William Andrews, a well known miller in this city, died at his home on Chestnut-street. Mr. Andrews was taken ill Saturday, with inflammation of the lungs, and his death was therefore somewhat sudden. He has been in the employ of J. Clark and Company for many years, and was highly respected by all who knew him.

Yellow Fever in Memphis, Tenn., is declining, according to press-reports. At Memphis today fifty deaths, New Orleans fifty-four, and Vicksburg only twelve.

Last evening Mayor Norcross and Mr. O. H. Pethers gave some rousing speeches at Johnston's to a large audience. They showed up the strong points of Republicanism in their talks, which were well received.

While Heads Are Bared.

LIEUTENANT ELY, it is ours reverently to acknowledge the service you have rendered.

To your country and ours, you gave all you had to give, a life, young and buoyant, offered when you had but just arrived at life's fullest understanding—and more than this no man can give.

But in the giving, sir, you gave as well the outpour of your stout young heart—that all of us to whom you pass along the touch might offer prayer, and carry on in better understanding of that ennobled cause for which no sacrifice shall be in vain.

Some of us are far behind the fighting lines of France today. For circumstance has made two battle lines, and there must be therefore those gone to fight, and others kept behind to carry on at home.

But as you say, both lines bring chance for deeds well done, and great investments too.

Little did you know, Lieutenant Ely, when you went to the post that day, that your last letter to those proud parents you left back home contained a message not alone for them, but, simple and sincere, for all your countrymen as well.

It did, indeed, for you uncovered the heart of all America when you wrote, "I want to say in closing, if anything happens to me let's have no mourning in spirit or in dress, for like a Liberty Bond, it is an investment, not a loss, when a man dies for his country."

The Fourth Liberty Loan is now announced.

Do you think, Lieutenant Ely, that we shall soon forget your admonition—or that we shall not proudly subscribe for all we possibly can of your country's Liberty Bonds, which you so nobly glorified.

Indeed, we can do no less, for it seems to us that each subscription blank must bear your parting salutation—"for like a Liberty Bond, it is an investment, not a loss, when a man dies for his country."

BUY UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BONDS OF THE FOURTH LIBERTY LOAN

Liberty Loan Headquarters, No. 5 N. Main St.

Go there tomorrow and subscribe for bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan, don't wait another day longer. If you do and others do the same thing your share will be allotted. This loan must go over and go over in a big way. Germany and her allies are being whipped to a frazzle right now. This loan will be an additional trimming and will take the heart out of the German defensive. Let's overwhelmingly subscribe this Fourth Liberty Loan. All subscriptions must be accompanied by a 10% payment of the total.
